The Conspiracy Question Discussed Ably and at

After the introduction of some testimony

in rebuttal for the defense, Judge Wing re-

Judge Wing then began his review of the evidence. After denouncing the evidence of Saloonkeeper Nieman, Major Sampson and Milkman Merles, the next point han-dled was that of the two knives supposed to be Cronin's, found in Coughlin's possession. On this point Judge Wing said:

Now, that whole question is very easily dis-posed of by the statement of two propositions, in which every mind on this jury will agree with me, I think. First, the defendant here, Coughlin, is either guilty or innocent. If inno-cent, he could not have had those knives, if they were Cronin's; if guilty, he would not have had them if they belonged to Dr. Cronin, plea in Coughlin's behalf.

THE WHITE HORSE AGAIN. THE WHITE HORSE AGAIN.

The speaker went on to argue that Coughlin's remark that "a prominent Northside Catholic would get hurt if he did not keep his mouth shut," had no application in this case, as it was not shown to apply to Cronin. He contended that Coughlin's remark to the effect that Cronin was suspected of being a spy was not inconsistent with the theory of innocence. As to the white horse, there was a reasonable doubt whether it was the same animal that drew Dr. Cronin to CHICAGO, December 2 .- Mr. Forrest, for the defense, introduced some testimony in rebuttal in the Cronin trial this morning the murder, a pair of pants which Coughlin there was a reasonable doubt whether it was the same animal that drew Dr. Cronin to his death; the preponderance of evidence was against it, and even if it were, still Coughlin might be innocent; he might not have known what the man from Michigan wanted it for; this man was a riend of Dan's then and there put on. In doing so he took off the old pair which he wore and emptied the pockets, placing the contents on a chair. Witness then examined the knives taken brother, and Dan could not do less for him.

The speaker then took up various other circumstances which were adduced in evidence to show Coughlin's connection with from Coughlin, and identified by Mr. Conklin as Dr. Cronin's, and said that he could

this city:

CHICAGO, November 20 .- We are now about to close our case. Everybody here, friends and former enemies alike, say that I will be acquitted; but inasmuch as the Clanna-Gael Camp 20 is the only thing before the jury, if anybody is convicted I may be in some danger on account of being an active member of said camp. Such a conviction can only come from an inference drawn from an inference. No evidence of the slightest kind has been introduced to connect me with the great crime, or of having any guilty knowledge of the death of Dr. Cronin. The impression that the murder grew out of the internal quarrels in such camp may make it unpleasant for those implicated, the only thing against whom may be the fact that they were unfortunate in belonging to the society. I am confident of acquittal, and that my name will be cleared from any suspicion whatever. to close our case. Everybody here, friends and

Those two plain propositions, in the mind of any reasoning man, would be the end of that knife episode—the last and grand climax that the State gave to a case of suspicion against these men. That they are not Dr. Cronin's is conclusively shown by those two considerations: That they were found 20 days after the homicide, in the possession of Coughlin; that if Coughlin was innocent, he could not have had them if they were Cronin's: if he is guilty, he would not have had them. That is all there is upon that episode, and that is all that can be made of it by legitimate argument.

Yet, they say a detective, a member of the police force, a man who has sent the men that had ongaged the horse for carrying the man to his death—they would have this court and jury believe that a man thus circumstanced would carry two little knives which would indicate his guilt beyond all earthly question, carry them after he was arrested, carry them after he was suspected. I say that if guilty he would not have had them. He did have them and therefore, they are not Cronin's knives. denta, Mrs. L. M. Harding and Mrs. Thomas Ewing; Treasurer, William R. last night at the family residence of Mrs. Armstrong, No. 212 Lacock street, Allegheny. After an elegant supper a number of speeches were made. Dr. D. B. Sturgeon, President of the Executive Committee, on behalf of the association, thanked the family for the kind treatment they had accorded throughout the work. Rev. David Jones, Captain W. P. Herbert, Miss Annie Armstrong, Colonel A. P. Burchfield and John Campbell spoke of the traits of the man in whose behalf the committee had been called into, existence. Rev. Jones, at the request of Miss Armstrong, thanked the committee in the name of the family for the work they had done. Secretary Martin reported that enough money had been raised to cover all expenses and all bills incurred had been paid, There had been paid in since the last report, $563 77. The report was adopted.

Mr. Shields moved that the receipted bill of A. E. Windsor & Co. be copied by an expert penman, framed and presented to family. The motion was adopted, and all the effects, papers, etc., of the association directed to be turned over to the family. A vote of thanks was tendered to the officers and the Executive Committee, and on motion the committee adjourned sine die, thus

Has a can of dynamite exploded and wrecked this beautiful drugstore? Or is it an earth-quake? No, my son, the druggist did it himself. The rush for Rogers' Royal Nervine was so great the poor fellow had not been able to get to bed for four nighta, and in trying to get down a bottle of Nervine he has jarred things a trifle. The people will have Rogers' Royal Nervine, and druggists do not keep sending us big checks for ten-gross orders because they love us, but because they can't help themselves. The "greatest tonic on earth," sells like hot cakes, and it would take a four-handed recording aogel to file away the bushels of testimonials that are pouring in upon us.

POLEY'S INTERESTING BALLGOSSIP

Al. Johnson, President of the proposed new basebalt league, gives some cheering news about the League's prospects. Ewing wants the St. Louis club transferred to Cincinnati in Brotherhood interests. Delehanty deserts the Brotherhood and joins the League. The date of the Brotherhood's next meeting has again been changed, this time to the 16th. PRODUCTAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATOR. CLEVELAND, December 2.-Albert L. Johnson, the young President of the Ball Players' League, came back to-day from ten days of hard work in the East. Mr. Johnson returned to face a pile of telegrams 12 inches high and letters innumerable. He was in the best of spirits when THE DIS-PATCH correspondent saw him at supper to-"So some people consider the Brother hood a simple game of bluff, do they?" said Mr. Johnson, laughing. "We will show He Failed to Capture Big Game for the them whether we mean business or not. I have put a stack of money in this movement, and you can depend upon it that I am not signing five-year leases without knowing what I am about. The Brotherhood has come to stay. De Wolf Hopper said to me in New York yesterday: 'The moment your first game is played you are at the top of the "Are you using any efforts to secure men al-ready signed with other organizations?" was

NOT SIGNING SIGNED MEN. "None whatever," said Mr. Johnson, "Let me tell you something. We have had numberless applications from men who have signed other contracts and are now anxious to come to us. If they have been paid advance money to us. If they have been paid advance money and have signed absolute contracts we have refused in every instance to take them."

"But you expect suits against you for signing League men?"
"Oh, certainly," said Mr. Johnson. "But we have every advantage. We have every good lawyer in the country, almost, on our side. We are able to go into the courts and prove that section 20 of the League constitution, under which they assent to the holding-over obligation, has been grievously violated. That section fixes the classification limit at $2,000, and provides for the expulsion of a club paying a man more money than that. Every member of the New York Club is ready and willing to swear that he received a larger sum. Some of them, indeed, were paid as much as $4,000. How is the League to get around this?"

[SPECIAL TRIEGRAM TO THE DISPATOR.]

HARRISBURG, December 2.—The Inter-State
League was organized here to-day by representatives from Altoona, Lebanon and Allentown, Pa., and Wilmington, Del. Two clubs from this city applied for admission, and after a protracted struggle the one recently organized won. Scranton and Wilkesbarre, although not represented at the meeting, are counted on as certain to enter the league. The eighth club will probably be Easton.

The new Harrisburg club, which will be managed by the manager of the club from this city, which won the Middle State League championship this year, will expend about $5,000 to put the large island in the Susquebanna river in proper condition for baseball playing. Two clubs in this city are among the probabilities.

If Staley is true to his many promises and pledges he certainly will be in the Brotherhood team here.

Mr. Smith has signed many youngsters, and is confident that they will make a good showing. However, it seems safe to say that it will take more than youngsters to cope against Cincinnati, Brooklyn, or even a mixture of Baltimore and Washington.

for the past 15 years. He was born in Marseilles, France, in 1852. When a boy he joined a traveling circus as trapeze performer. He first conceived the idea of jumping from loftly heights by jumping from a trapeze into a net. He gradually increased the height and being successful in his experiments, abandoned the circus and took to jumping. He traveled all through Europe, and at times would jump from places 200 feet in heigh'. He visited Paris last summer, and astounded the Parisians by announcing that he would jump from the Eiffel tower. The Government, how-ever, interfered, and Peynand was compelled ever, interfered, and Peynand was compelled to abandon the idea.

Peynaud married in Paris, during the exposition, and with his bride came to America. All last summer he jumped at different resorts around New York. Friday night was very foggy and damp, and when Peynaud sprang from the tower he could not see the net below distinctly enough. He struck on his neck instead of on his shoulder, and was picked up unconscious, and finally died.

When asked to-day what he thought of the prospects, he replied: "Do I think there will be a fight? How can I say? I know I want to fight, and will do all in my power to get one on. But I can't fight alone, Jackson must be consulted. I wont fight for $19,000, I can get $80,000 for the same amount of work, and that's the way things look to me just now. I've never heard officially from the California Club, but if it is true that they've hung up the nigrardly sum first mentioned I will say that I think they desire an unfair advantage of Jackson. If the fight is worth $50,000 to one club, it is worth something like that amount to another, and no club in the world can afford to offer so liberal a purse as the California. If Jackson wants to fight me, let him tell the California people so. I'd as lief fight there as elsewhere, and if they will offer a suitable purse, the earlier the date the better. Noremac wrote to request that the track be surveyed, as Hegelman recently had broken a 48-hour record at Salem and it couldn't count because there was no certificate as to the distance of the track. "I am certain," said Noremac, "that Hegelman broke all records of 48 hours, but as the track was not surveyed by the proper people his marks did not count. curred in that way? No one, unless he is desirous of believing it.

Why, the circumstances that they have arrayed here to above a conspiracy in Camp 20 would lie at the door of any of the other men who participated in the meeting of the camp that night. Is there anything suspicious about it? It may be barely suspicious—what interpretation are you going to put upon the State's proof? Are you going to draw inferences from it that are not there and are not lawfui? The prosecution made a great cry about unwilling witnesses, and yet after they produced people that the prosecutior announced to be patricts, they had nothing to tell but what the other COUGHLIN'S TELEPHONE TALK.

Judge Wing said that the preponderance of evidence was against the appointment of a committee in Camp 20 on the night of the row over Cronin's reading the report on the trial of the Triangle. The prosecutor handled the words about plots to murder

Now there are only three ways under heaven of establishing a conspiracy in any particular case. One is by direct proof. That can rarely be made unless some man becomes dissatisfied, or repentant, or something of the kind, and reveals the conspiracy. Another way is by circumstantial proof; by incidents and facts and surrounding occurrences. Now, here they have sought to establish a conspiracy in this case and they have got to acquit. This case can not be maintained in any court of justice against these men unless the fact of conspiracy is established beyond all reasonable doubt. These are two of the ways to establish the conspiracy, and then there is the further way, and the only other way that I ever heard of, and that is by considering all the independent acts and facts, where proven against, and from the consideration of those facts infer conspiracy. Now you can not establish a conspiracy in both these ways. You can take either one, but you can not take both under the law, because if you did you would be reasoning in a circle, a method that is forbidden the logic, and it is not admissible at all in a court of law. You can consider all the proven facts, and from that infer the conspiracy, if a conspiracy is proven by that process beyond all reasonable doubt. But you can not take a partially proven conspiracy and then infer that the act proven is in conformity with the conspiracy.

is in conformity with the conspiracy. ONLY PACTS CAN COUNT. It is fair and it is right under the law that when you are weighing any circumstance against Daniel Coughlin you should look at that circumstance in the light of law, but not in the light of facts proven against the other man; but I do object to this jury or this Court taking a partly proven conspiracy, and from that giving color and character to the individ-ual circumstances and acts which are proven ual circumstances and acts which are proven against my client. That is a forbidden method. Now, let us see briefly if there is a conspiracy here, established beyond reasonable Joubt, to which Daniel Couchlin is a party. They do not claim that the declarations of the parties in the camps at the various meetings constitute any proofs of the conspiracy, except inferentially and by process of reason. I will tell you that does not constitute any proof at all.

I never heard presented as absurd a theory of conspiracy as the State presents to us in this case. It is an unnatural and unreasonable theory to begin with. It is true that they had their factional differences; it is true, perhaps, that Cronin led one faction, and that some other party led another. It is true that that man was disliked and despised by half his brethren in that society; it is further true that he had his friends and his folizers in the other branch. It may be true that a short time before he met his death fault was found with him.

THE DOINGS OF CAMP 20. theory and give it the most favorable construction possible to them, and at the most it only proves that in that camp there were a number of men who disliked Cronin, a number of men who disliked his performances in his own camp, a number of men who were inclined to censure a number of men who were inclined to censure him for some supposed violation of their camp rules. That is the most that can be made of it. What kind of a camp was it? How many men participated in it? It ran from one up to two or three hundred; I don't know the full number. I know that the proof shows that 40 men were present on the night they say this conspiracy was planned. Whoever heard of any such thing since the world began? Planned, too, under the very eye of his best and most intimate and warmest friends. A most likely proposition. Preposterous upon its face, unlikely in its very aspect; who can believe it occurred in that way? No one, unless he is desirous of believing it.
